

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

Read more about Early Journal Content at <http://about.jstor.org/participate-jstor/individuals/early-journal-content>.

JSTOR is a digital library of academic journals, books, and primary source objects. JSTOR helps people discover, use, and build upon a wide range of content through a powerful research and teaching platform, and preserves this content for future generations. JSTOR is part of ITHAKA, a not-for-profit organization that also includes Ithaka S+R and Portico. For more information about JSTOR, please contact support@jstor.org.

Announcement:

- ¶ The last issue of the WASHINGTON HISTORICAL QUARTERLY announced the resumption of the regular publication after a suspension from October, 1908, to April, 1912. The present is the second issue since that suspension.
- ¶ There has been manifest a gratifying revival of interest in the purposes of the magazine and the society publishing it. Both have a rich field for work.
- ¶ The important Journals of John Work and William Fraser Tolmie in this issue will be followed by others equally fundamental to the history of the Pacific Northwest.
- ¶ We welcome all into the ranks of the WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY STATE HISTORICAL SOCIETY. All members receive the QUARTERLY and any other publications the society may issue. The annual cost to members is two dollars.